P R E F A C E .

THE following collection of ARMS AND LINEAGES is an attempt to show what families belong to the old gentry who were resident in the County of Warwick before the year 1650. These families for the most part bore Arms, such appendages being ever looked upon as an evidence of gentle blood. In very early times, persons of distinction were allowed to assume what Arms they pleased as military ensigns, and to grant them to their retainers, and they were afterwards adopted as honorable distinctions. When, however, they came to be regarded as an evidence of honor and blood, they were eagerly sought after by all who rose to places of trust or became possessors of property. The assumption of Arms at pleasure was in consequence forbidden by royal authority as early as the reign of Hen. V., and no one was allowed to bear them unless they had them by descent or grant. To this end the Kings of Arms were commissioned by the Crown to make grants to fit persons, under the authority of the Earl Marshal. And in order that none might bear them except those who had them by descent or grant, the Kings of Arms were authorized to visit their respective provinces, and to summon those who used them to give satisfactory evidence of their right to do so. If the persons summoned on these occasions could establish their claim, a record of the family was entered in the Herald's books. These records are preserved in the Herald's College, and in public and private libraries, and from them most of the information in the following pages has been obtained. Persons bearing Arms by descent from the old families should be able to deduce an unbroken Lineage from some ancestor whose claim has been allowed by the Heralds, and recorded in these documents; and such only have a right to use them.

These Visitations commenced at a very early period,—as early as the reign of Hen. IV., as we find from a note in one of the Harl MS. The entry is as follows: “Visitacio facta per Marischallum de Norroy ult. ann. R. Henrici 4ti., 1412.” The regular Visitations, however, did not begin until early in the sixteenth century. Thomas Benolt, Clarenceux King of Arms, had a commission granted, 20 Hen. VIII., to visit the Counties of Gloucester, Worcester, Oxford, Wilts, Bucks, and Stafford. After this, the Visitations were regularly made until the end of the seventeenth century, the last being that of Southampton made by the Deputies of Sir Henry St. George, Clarenceux, in the year 1686.

The Visitations of Warwickshire were as follows:

By Robert Cooke, Chester Herald, Deputy for William Hervey, Clarenceux, in 1563.

By Philpot, Somerset Herald, temp. Jas. I.

By Sampson Lennard and Augustine Vincent, Deputies for William Camden, Clarenceux, in 1619.

By Thomas May, Gregory King, and Henry Dethick, Deputies for Henry St. George, Clarenceux, in 1682-83.

In transcribing from the MSS. the old spelling has generally been preserved, and where a variation in the spelling occurs, more than one form has been used.

A distinguishing mark is affixed to families who according to Mr. Shirley are of knightly and gentle descent, but only to those whose present representative resides in Warwickshire.

An Appendix has been given of some families who now live in the County, and bear Arms, but whose names do not occur in the older Visitations of Warwickshire. These Arms have not been compared with any Heraldic records, but accepted simply on the authority of the families which use them.

The compiler acknowledges his obligation to the Librarian of Queen's College, Oxford, and also of Caius College, Cambridge, and to the various Clergymen in the County who have allowed him free access to the Parish Registers.

Further information respecting any of the families mentioned in this work may be obtained by application to the Rev. F. W. KITTERMASTER, Meriden, Coventry; the persons wishing such information paying the expenses of having the Arms copied, and the Lineages transcribed; the cost of the former will be from five to ten shillings, that of the latter will depend on the length of the Lineage.
